THIRTY-SIX ZEPPELIN RAIDS.

Three air raids were made on England since last Friday. On Saturday night the northeast coast was attacked and Sunday night Scotland was included in the bombardment.

Beginning on Christmas day, 1914, the Zeppelin raids have continued until the attacks have numbered 36 and over 350 men, women and children have been killed and 870 injured. The greater loss of life was in the raid of January 31, when the airships, flying over the Midlands and east coast of England, killed 59 and injured 101. On October 18, when London was bombed, 56 were killed and 114 injured. On Friday night last, there were 43 deaths and 66 injuries.

Nearly all the raids have been along the east of England, as the following list of districts raided discloses:

December 24, 1914, Dover; December 25, Dover and mouth of Thames. January 19, 1915, Yarmouth, Sheringham and Kings Lynn; February 21, Colchester, Coggeshall and Braintree; April 14, Tyneside; April 15, Lowestoft and east coast; April 16, Faversham; April 23, Ipswich and Bury St. Edmunds; May 10, Southampton; May 16, Ramsgate; May 27, Southampton; May 31, outer London; June 4, east and southeast coast; June 6, east coast; June 15, northeast coast; July 3, Harwich; August 9, east coast; August 12, east coast; August 17, eastern counties; September 7, eastern counties and London; September 11, east coast; September 12, east coast; September 13, Kentish coast; October 13, London and eastern counties soldiers. January 23, 1916, east coast and Kent; January 23, Dover; January 31, Midlands and east coast; February 9, Ramsgate and Broadstairs; February 20, east and southeast coast; March 1, southeast coast; March 5, north and east coast; March 19, east coast; March 31, east and southeast coast; April 1, northeast coast; April 2, Scotland and British coast.

One of the German crew of the Zeppelin shot down Friday night, in justifying the raids, said the purpose of the attacks was not to kill women and children, but to search out and destroy fortified points or military plants. He further stated that those in the airships could distinctly make out the different objects to be attacked and most of the bombs were delivered with great accuracy. If that be true, then why have the great majority of the victims been women and children?

From what information has been available to Americans, the raids appear to be designed to overawe and terrorize, following the German idea of frightfulness, and, therefore, are looked upon as violating the laws of civilized warfare.

JAPAN AND GREAT BRITAIN MAY DISAGREE.

If Japan should break from the alliance with Great Britain, there would be danger of the island empire forming an alliance with Germany, and then, if the central powers were to win the war, the troubles of the United States would be of a magnitude greater than the chasing of a Mexican bandit.

Literary Digest has been reviewing the Japanese papers and has discovered that the veiled hostility toward Great Britain, which has for many months been noticeable in a certain section of the Japanese press, gains a fresh importance from the statement recently made to the Japanese House of Peers by Baron Ishii, the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Baron told the House, according to cable-dispatches, that the Japanese and British governments were in negotiation with regard to Japanese emigration, a subject fully covered by the existing treaty between Great Britain and Japan. Despite the denials of the Japanese Foreign Office that there is any thought of abrogating the present treaty, the papers of the Mikado's Empire believe that something is afoot. This view is also taken by The Japan Advertiser, an American paper published in Tokyo, which considers it possible that Japan may withdraw from her alliance with England. The Advertiser says:

"Before the war began, the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was a target of continuous attack, the complaint then being that Japan derived no economic benefit from it. Since the war began, the attacks on England have never been more bitter, never more heedless, never more ready to exaggerate every trivial incident or rumor that seemed to tell against their ally's cause.

"The Japanese public are continuously instructed by their press that the Alliance is a one-sided and worn-out contract, and so persistently is this proclaimed that it is impossible for any foreign reader to escape the conclusion that a considerable body of Japanese opinion is hostile to the Alliance."

Among the Japanese papers the Tokyo Yomuri has been the leader in the agitation against the treaty, and has published a series of articles on the subject from the pens of men prominent in political or academic circles. In one of these articles Prof. Lathe Lett exclaims:

"The present war in Europe has made it clear to us that there is no community of ideas between Japan and England. Japan stands for loyalty and justice, Germany for loyalty and injustice, while England stands for selfishness and injustice."

monwealth, but, in order to uphold the reputation of the teaching staffs, one of the cities of that state has found it necessary to issue a manifesto that neither "fat" nor "flossy" candidates for positions are wanted. This causes an eastern paper to inquire as to the meaning of this rule and to remark:

"There are persons, no doubt, who will find a part-explanation in the dogmatic dictum that 'nobody loves a fat man,' but this does not account for the sweeping scope of the ban, which evidently includes women candidates, as well as men. There is no law, nor even any maxim, against loving a fat woman—on general principles, that is. Of course, certain conventionalities apply if she happens to be another man's wife; but that's another story. How true it is that times change and men change with them! The late lamented Julius Caesar, for instance, who executed the lean and hungry look of one Cassius, and expressed an impatient desire to have men about him who were fat—'stout-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights'—could never have been elected to the board of school directors of Pottsville, Pennsylvania; and even if he had been elected, he would have found himself in a hopeless minority when the matter of avoiding fat came to be considered in the selection of teachers. The celebrated Mr. Jack Spratt might have succeeded in landing a teacher's position in Pottsville, but his wife wouldn't have stood the ghost of a chance. It is entirely safe to say that the board of Pottsville school directors made this ruling without taking a vote of the schoolboy population, which, at least individually, would have declared a strong preference for being laid across a plump, cushiony knee, as against a sharp and bony one.

"And then there are the 'flossy' candidates. Dr. Noah Webster, in his rather pretentious book of words and definitions, tells us that 'flossy' means 'pertaining to, made of, or resembling floss; hence, light; downy.' If the Pottsville board's objection is to lightness, the inconsistency of its position cannot be overlooked; for absence of fat, on which the board insists, inevitably presupposes a degree of lightness as to weight. The objection is to downy candidates, that is, to downy as to character, should be an easy matter for him of pedagogic aspirations, just out of college, to dispense with the upper-labial down, for the sake of securing a position as teacher in Pottsville. But if the inhibition is against candidates, flossy-well, the New Hampshire frame of mind, long accustomed to the smooth schoolmarm in the world, cannot be expected to comprehend the low ideals of some communities in other states. However, we wish the children of Pottsville joy in the slim and angular education which is in store for them."

RUSSIAN HERE TO STUDY MORMONISM.

Walking around the world, Baron Kervick, a young Russian whose home is in Riga, is devoting two days in Ogden to a study of conditions in Utah. He is much interested in the Mormons, as religious beliefs are one line of study which he is pursuing on his long journey in search of information. He expects to carry back to Russia new ideas and to correct the old stories and geographies which are in use in the schools of his home city.

"I left Riga a year before the war started," he said, "and have traveled extensively. I want the allies to win in the great struggle, but I am not deeply concerned myself in that direction, because I have given my energies in another direction. I am laboring in the field of education, agriculture and religious thought."

Explaining his earlier impressions of the western part of the United States, gained from his school books, he expected to find uninhabited desert wastes, or wild stretches where the Indian was supreme. Instead he was pleased to see a land of progress, with modern cities and beautiful homes.

"Why in Lovelock, Nevada, marked on my map as a wilderness," he said, "I found a high school of 40 students on which over $350 per scholar is expended each year, and at Tecoma, Nevada, there was a school teacher and school house but no pupils, proving the intense interest our Americans have in education."

"I had wrong ideas as to America. Let me correct a few of your misunderstandings of Russia. My country today is thoroughly progressive. Many of the old abuses have passed and there is an awakening which promises to carry Russia to the highest point of advancement in education, industry and material welfare. Your histories and geography of Russia need revising. They are like my school books on America, fifty years behind the times."

Turning to the war, Baron Kervick was asked if Russia could "come back." He replied that the Russians already were demonstrating their ability to hold the Germans in check. He was in Japan five months and saw great factories operating day and night to equip the Russian soldiers. Shiploads of ammunition, rifles and large guns were going out of Nagasaki and other ports to Vladivostok and Port Arthur, to be transported over the Siberian road to the battle front.

"The Russians today," he said, "are immeasurably better prepared than at any time since the declaration of hostilities. They retreated last fall, but that was a strategic retreat, intended to relieve the pressure on the western front. This spring my people will be the aggressors and their initial drive will be in Bukovina, and then, once more, through Galicia. The aim is to get down in to Austria and strike at Germany along the lines of least resistance."

"Russia now has 6,000,000 men in arms and can add 2,000,000 recruits each year, out of the natural increase in population."

How accurate is Baron Kervick's measure of Russian military power is yet to be disclosed, but this spring, when the Germans recoil from the west front and for a second time begin to batter at the Russian lines, we shall have an opportunity of comparing promise and performance.

JAPAN COLONIZING SOUTH SEA ISLANDS

San Francisco, April 3.—That Japan is colonizing and apparently intends to retain the south sea islands captured during the present war from the Germans was the statement made here by Dr. Frederick Starr, professor of anthropology, university of Chicago, who was en route to Chicago today from the Orient after six months research work in Japan and Korea.

"Japan," said Dr. Starr, "has no intention of withdrawing from the Ladrone or Marshall Islands which she has taken from Germany and which lie about midway between the Philippines and Hawaii. She has already undertaken extensive schemes with reference to the postal service, telegraphs and cables of these possessions. She is sending settlers in quantity to them."

"Since the war began in Europe," continued Dr. Starr, "more than 1,000 new millionaires have been made in Japan. Extravagant ideas have taken possession of the Japanese nation and a wave of speculation is sweeping over the country."

Dr. Starr said also that Japan's trade with India had increased enormously since the war and that in this development lay the possibility of future commercial competition with England which might endanger the friendship that now exists between the two nations.

During his stay in Japan, Dr. Starr traveled from Tokyo to Kyoto, 300 miles along the Tokaido highway. He wore native dress, traveled in a rickshaw and subsisted on native foods, thereby, he declared, making such a hit with the Japanese that they insisted on his writing a book about it.

He said the Japanese treated him with the utmost friendliness and that they looked upon the United States as a friend too much occupied in money-getting to undertake wars or take any serious part in world movements.

Because Korean culture, said Dr. Starr, was fast becoming merged with that of the Japanese, he devoted much time in Korea to collecting represen-

Our "DeLuxe" Spring is what its name implies—a luxurious spring in every respect, except price. It costs about half as much as a box spring, is equally comfortable, lasts longer, and is more sanitary, because easily cleanable. It is a masterpiece of construction—noiseless, sagless and handsomely finished.

The "DeLuxe" Spring is made up of 63 10-inch coil springs, with 36 7-inch coil springs running around the outer edge. All of the wire used in these coils is made of the highest carbon wire, oil tempered. The 10-inch springs are made of No. 11-12 wire, while the 7-inch springs used on the border are made of No. 10-12 wire. The coils are tied through the middle by a patented method of double wire cross-tying and each row of coils is supported by individualists, with a heavy angle iron hang-over fitting the rail of the bed.
